PLANS FOR DRAINAGE

DR. MABRY OUTLINES COMPREHENSIVE SYSTEM FOR HANDLING DISTRICT SEWAGE

Editor Glendale Evening News:

Replying to your request regarding the vital matter of sewage disposal in Los Angeles county and the cities of Glendale, Tropico and Eagle Rock in particular, permit me to say that after conscientious study of this problem I was confronted by four essential features:

1. There is at present no system of sewage disposal installed satisfactory to the city using it and to its neighbors.

2. None has been proposed which would make these conditions more favorable.

3. The majority of the municipalities of the county are using cesspools, which is admittedly unsanitary and increasingly objectionable.

4. The greater number of cities have no possible system other than cesspools within their financial reach. This is pre-eminently the condition of Tropico, Glendale and Eagle Rock today. Bearing these facts in mind, we find Los Angeles with an outfall sewer which sanitary authorities are insisting be radically altered.

Pasadena, South Pasadena and Alhambra are seeking to install a sewer plan over the vigorous objections of their neighbors. Other cities have septic tanks which are constant sources of annoyance and trouble.

Evidently therefore no system can be sufficient other than one which shall include every municipality in the district. Based upon this conclusion and rejecting the possible solution available to a few localities, i.e., annexation to Los Angeles, because such a vital matter affecting all the people should not be used as a club or as a means to secure an end, I have concluded that there should be formed a great sanitary district embracing every part of Los Angeles county and possibly part of Orange county. These two sections are topographically so located that they could be drained by one great trunk system of sewers leading to a reduction plant suitable for the purpose.

Such a plant could be made a source of profit and the recovered waters utilized for irrigation or devoid of injurious properties drained to the sea. By this method all communities could be relieved of an impossible burden and find a method of sewage disposal within their financial reach.

That this plan is feasible is evident from what has been done in the Chicago drainage district, which includes some fifteen counties.

It is evident that there are many objections both legal and practical which must be overcome; but these are simply details.

On the occasion of the hearing of protests against the proposed Pasadena sewage farm, before the board of supervisors, I availed myself of the opportunity of speaking on this subject before the board and an audience of some 400 interested parties. The idea outlined here was well received and growing from it the board of supervisors has issued a call for a convention of representatives from all the municipalities in the county to meet January 12, 1916, to consider the sewage proposition.

At that time I hope to secure definite action on the plans herein outlined and if such action be taken, I will feel that the most important matter now before Los Angeles county, not even excepting the storm water problem, will be in a fair way to satisfactory solution.

DR. WILLIAM C. MABRY,
Tropico.

IN HONOR OF VISITOR

Ferns brought from the San Francisco expositon and placed in a crystal fern dish adorned the pretty dinner board of Mr. and Mrs. Sam H. Goldstein, who on Tuesday evening had for guests Messrs. J. D. Kaufman, S. Joffee and Phil Kaufman to meet their house guest, J. Fardstein, leaving soon for his home at Bakersfield, in their home at 717 West Fifth street. The hours following dinner were spent in music and card playing.

APPEAL FOR MEMBERS

GARDEN SOCIETY DESIRES REAL ESTATE MEN OF GLENDALE TO JOIN ORGANIZATION

On Thursday evening, January 6, at 8 o'clock the next meeting of the Garden society will be held. The chamber of commerce donates its rooms at 1011 West Broadway for this purpose. A social half hour precedes the meeting. Come at 7:30 o'clock, meet your friends, and become acquainted with very interesting people. A splendid program has been arranged. Mr. Dawson of Pasadena and Mrs. Luckey of Pasadena, who are greatly interested in the plan being worked out this winter in that city of putting their unemployed to plow and plant the vacant lots, will come from Pasadena specially to tell us under what ordinances they work, what has already been accomplished, and what they hope to accomplish in the future.

Manager Watson, of Glendale, will give a ten-minute paper on the laws and ordinances regulating the care of vacant lots and parkings in Glendale. He will tell us just what authority we have, just how much we may or may not do.

The president of the Garden society will offer a suggestion as to the treatment of the parkings on Brand boulevard. Judge Miller will give an account of the city window box campaign. He will tell us what merchants have already ordered window boxes and what he expects the business center of Glendale to look like six months from now.

Real estate men are asked to read the following statement: The real estate men who ought to be ardent backers of the Garden society, because they are going to benefit their pockets as a result of the Garden society's many efforts, the real estate men who ought to be members and boosters of the society, are conspicuous by their absence. The only real estate member of the society lives, it is true, in Glendale, but his office is in Los Angeles, and he does not handle Glendale property. Not a single Glendale real estate man to date of writing, has joined the Garden society. Do they not realize that a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together, is the way to make big business?

CHILDREN'S DAY AT THE TUESDAY AFTERNOON CLUB

For several years past the women of the Tuesday Afternoon club have set aside one afternoon during the year as Children's Day, at which time the little tots of the club members and their invited guests are entertained with a program entirely arranged for the little ones.

Yesterday afternoon's program given at the Palace Grand theater was taken from Dickens' Christmas Carol, of which Mrs. Coral Harrison Sloan arranged the more important chapters into scenes that could be effectively presented in pantomime by young children. This wonderfully talented reader gave the story lines in a most charming and convincing manner, so simply arranged that the youngest child present could readily understand the playlet.

Both Mrs. Charles Toll, who had charge of the arrangements for the afternoon's entertainment, and Mrs. Sloan deserve every credit for the work accomplished. The production proved the untiring efforts and capability of the handling of children by Mrs. Sloan, their instructor, for never was a professional performance more smoothly given.

The lead, Scrooge, a miser, was well impersonated with clever acting and a thorough understanding of his role by Billy Justema and "Old Marley," a ghost in the person of John T. Jenkins, was well done. Old Fezziwig was truly a "Joy" and Mrs. Fezziwig a "Smile" for they radiated love and happiness in their kindnesses to others. These characters were given in a most creditable manner by Charles Hulburt Toll, Jr., and Carolyn Grey. The three Fezziwig daughters were Mildred McKee, Doris Packer and Orrell Hester and they were very good in their roles. The "Bunch of Young Fellows" was well done by Maynard Toll, John Richardson, Katherine Hendricks, Flora Kenney, Alice Ewens, Gertrude Coward, Marcella Miller, Lillian Mason and Marguerite Ghiglia, while Gladys Lowe made an excellent clerk, Bob Cratchitt.

The scene given in the Cratchitt home was sweetly pathetic with Billy Harrison playing "Tiny Tim," a cripple. The other members of the family were Mrs. Cratchitt, by Marcella Miller; Martha, by Doris Packer; Belinda, Eleanor Bradford; Peter, Maynard Toll, and the two romping

FELL AMONG THIEVES

VICIOUS HOBOES ASSAULT AND ROB AUSTRIAN MINER ON SAN FERNANDO ROAD

John Kopina, an Austrian miner, is sadly reflecting today as he lies bruised and helpless on the rude pallet of the Glendale jail that he could not be much worse off if he were in his own country and in the trenches. John did not leave Austria to avoid the war. He has been in this country some years and has worked up and down California plying his skilled trade of tool-sharpener in the mines and oilfields.

Kopina had been working in Southern California for some time, but the wanderlust came over him and he longed to go back to the free life of the Northern Sierra Mining camps, where his skill as a sharpener and temperer of picks and drills and his other mechanical acquirements would be appreciated. He had $19 in his pocket and, being frugally inclined, started from Los Angeles to walk to Sacramento, whence he could easily reach the mining country. It was his intention to work at odd jobs along the road and thus earn his living and keep his money intact. From Los Angeles he took a car to Burbank and got off there to purchase food. While doing so, he saw two evil looking tramps eyeing him. He paid little attention to them but believes now that they had been sizing him up and had concluded that he would have some money.

Proceeding along the road, Kopina descried the two hoboes by the wayside. They immediately got up and called to him to stop. This he did reluctantly. They had no sooner come up to him than they rushed him and threw him to the ground. Kopina fought as well as he could, but the hoboes having thrown him down in their first rush kicked him viciously in the face, head and ribs and pounded him cruelly until they knocked him into insensibility. They then robbed him of his $19, his watch and a few other articles and went away leaving him half dead.

Kopina lay in the brush all last night and this morning word was sent to the Glendale police of the murderous attack. Chief Herald detailed Patrolman Hollenbeck to go find the wounded man. Hollenbeck found Kopina and brought him into headquarters where he was cleaned up and his wounds attended to. He now lies, with swollen face and badly bruised head, patiently waiting till he is well enough to take the road again. The hoboes having got twelve hours start have disappeared from this neighborhood.

SOMETHING NEW IN MUSIC

Recently Mrs. Zay Rector Bevitts, of San Diego, furnished the music section of the Tuesday afternoon club with an interesting afternoon telling of her own experience and success in teaching music to children.

She also gave a parlor talk the following afternoon at the home of Mrs. Eva L. Cunningham, 1414 Salem street. Mrs. Bevitts teaches the Dunning system and also teaches piano by Harmony Diagrams. She is the originator of this system of harmony and it is meeting with great success. It is approved and recommended by the originators of the Dunning system as Mrs. Cunningham is the only teacher in Glendale using either of these systems, some of her class were used to demonstrate the results of the work and it was wonderful to see what only two months of work, with no previous instruction, had done for these children. A little boy seven years old played a piece with both hands in the key of C, and at the request of several different ones in the audience played it with equal ease and proficiency in the keys of G, A minor and F sharp major.

The children showed as thorough a knowledge of the bar as of the treble staff and all present felt that these systems of music present something new and decidedly worth while.

BIRTHDAY DINNER

Merry was the little dinner party on Tuesday evening when Master Edmund Parker presided as host in celebration of his fourteenth birthday anniversary at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Parker of 147 East Third street. Adorning the table was a low crystal bowl of pepper berries and foliage on which covers were arranged for the host, his parents and little sister Katherine, the guests numbering Master Rowland Currant, Master Chauncey Pitcher, Master Paul Fromm, Master Jack Ewings and Master Ezins Smith. A Washington pie was cut in place of the usual birthday cake.

ABOUT DEPOSIT RULE

CITY ATTORNEY EVANS DEFINES RIGHT OF COMPANIES TO ASK CASH GUARANTY

There has been much disputation concerning the right of companies supplying public utilities such as gas, electric light, water, etc., to demand a cash deposit before supplying their service. The subject has been a sore matter with the public for many years. It has meant the tieing up of large sums of money in the hands of certain companies who, it is true, recently began paying a small interest on the sums deposited with them after having had them for some time.

That the public believed that this was an imposition has been manifest in the many communications sent to the daily newspapers on the subject, roundly condemning the companies for their greed. That the subject has retained its interest to the purchasers of public utility service up to the present time is manifest in what City Attorney Evans says with regard to his experience:

"Prior to last election," said City Attorney Evans to a representative of The Glendale Evening News, "the city itself had jurisdiction over and could regulate the service of public utilities, through corporations. It could control and govern these corporations and see that the public got fair play. Now the relation of the city to such corporations is changed.

"At last election the people themselves gave control of public utility corporations to the Railroad Commission, taking that supervisory right completely out of the hands of the city. A great part of the public is not acquainted with this change for I am constantly in receipt of communications from citizens desiring to know whether or not the gas and telephone companies have a right to require a deposit from those desiring to use their service, and the right to refuse to install such service should the deposit be not forthcoming.

"In answer to all such queries I have been in the habit of replying that since the people gave the power of control over public utility corporations into the hands of the Railroad Commission, that body has made a most thorough and searching investigation into the rules governing this matter and on Dec. 15, 1915, issued an order dealing with it. This order covers the whole matter and runs as follows:

"RULE 1.—A water, gas, electric or telephone utility may, under uniform, undiscriminatory rules and regulations, require that an applicant for metered or measured service establish his credit before service is delivered, unless a prepayment device makes such procedure unnecessary. The applicant's credit will be considered established if he (1) owns the premises; or (2) makes a cash deposit; or (3) furnishes a guarantor for the payment of his bills, satisfactory to the utility; or (4) has paid all his bills promptly to the utility during the twelve months prior to the effective date of the order herein.'

"Complaints of any violation of the foregoing regulation may properly be made to the Railroad Commission since at the time of the last election, the people of the state, as already pointed out, voted the governing of these matters to said commission. It will be noticed that with the exception of section 4 of rule 1 the rule governing this matter of a deposit stands exactly as it did before."

GRIM OUTLOOK FOR THE TAXPAYER

Taxpayers of most cities will tell you that they are already overburdened with imposts and that it is with many of them a question if it is not better not to own property. There are cities in the United States where arbitrary improvements have improved owners out of their holdings. That such conditions are likely to become more common may be feared as the result of a recent decision of Justice Charles E. Hughes, of the United States Supreme Court. He delivered this decision from the bench in a small case from Missouri. This decision appears to open the way for more drastic taxation laws by states than have hitherto been held constitutional.

Justice Hughes holds that a tax is an enforced contribution for the payment of public expense. He says that it is laid by some rule or apportionment according to which the persons or property taxed share the public burden, and whether taxation operates upon all within the state or upon those of a given class or locality, its nature is the same.

"The power of segregation for taxation purposes has everyday illustration in the experience of local communities, the members of which by reason of their membership, or the owners of property within the bounds of their political subdivision, are compelled to bear the burdens both of the successes and of the failures of local administration," says Justice Hughes. He goes on to amplify this by stating that when local improvements may be deemed to result in special benefits, a further classification may be made and special assessments imposed accordingly.

In such cases, however, there is no requirement of the Federal constitution that for every payment there must be an equal benefit. The Justice held that the state in its discretion might lay such assessments in proportion to position, frontage, area, market value or to benefits estimated by commissioners; and unless the exaction is a flagrant abuse, and by reason of its arbitrary character is mere confiscation of property, it cannot be maintained that the state has exceeded its taxing power.

It can easily be seen that this decision opens up an avenue for the raising of revenue in a state that is not likely to be overlooked by the taxing powers. Money is always wanted for one public purpose or another. If it were always wisely expended it would undoubtedly have a wonderful effect in stimulating the growth and development of a state; but such is not always the case and the placing of a further power to tax in the hands of parties already eagerly looking toward the spending of public money, is placing within their reach a temptation which, it is safe to say, they will never pray against.

This question of excessive taxation is a serious one especially for the man of moderate means, who, in the end, will have to pay most. The rich and unscrupulous will find some means or will try to find some means of evading such taxes; but the poor man and the man of moderate income have no remedy. Justice Hughes is essentially a lawyer. He sees the legal aspect of any case at all times but rarely dreams of looking for its equitable features.

STATISTICS OF BUBONIC PLAGUE

Owing to the effective powers in the hands of the United States Public Health Service, which handled the bubonic plague when it broke out in California in March, 1907, the disease was easily stamped out and finally eradicated. The health authorities say that it was found in that connection that the presence of plague in rats or ground squirrels was of far more significance than its presence in man, and that the history of the disease in a community must be primarily that of its presence in the rodents of the community.

From a vast antiquity the bubonic plague has come down to the present age, attenuated doubtless through its passage through so many channels and meeting with a powerful barrier to its development in the sanitary conditions of modern cities and a complete obstacle in the modern medical methods of combating it. It will be remembered that when the plague struck the Philistines, as narrated in the Old Testament, they made gold images of the rats or mice by which they believed it to be carried and also of the buboes, or "emerods" (hemorrhoids) from which the disease gets its name "bubonic." These they placed on the altars of the temples as a votive offering and a token of remembrance.

It is the modern rat or squirrel that carries the infection of the plague and to exterminate the rats of a city is to do away with the menace. When the plague was discovered among the Chinese of San Francisco in 1900 the state authorities attempted to deal with it and succeeded in eradicating it. That, however, was not a serious outbreak. From 1900 to 1904 when the plague was finally suppressed there were 121 human cases with 115 deaths.

In 1907 the disease reappeared in San Francisco and was dealt with by the United States Public Health department. That department has been carrying on its work even to the present hour. During the last outbreak in San Francisco there were 159 human cases and 77 deaths, the last occurring January, 1908. There was likewise found a total of 398 plague-infected rats, the last plague rat being found in October, 1908. The records of the San Francisco office show that there have also occurred 29 human cases of plague in the state outside of San Francisco.

Adding those occurring in San Francisco to those mentioned outside that city gives a grand total of 186 cases of human plague that have occurred in California since May, 1907, or since March, 1900, a total of 309 human cases.

It is well known that Port Costa is the principal grain-shipping port for the barley and other grain raised in the great central valleys of the state. Thither come vessels from all over the world; sailing ships, "tramps," and large steam freighters, to load grain for European ports. Large quantities of grain are scattered along the railroad tracks and in the freight sheds in this neighborhood. This supply offers sustenance for both ground squirrels from the adjacent hills and the rats that infest the wharves.

It has been discovered that at some time, a number of years ago, plague-infected rats wandered ashore from some of those deep-sea freighters at Port Costa, and that the infected fleas from those animals transferred the disease to the California ground squirrels in this locality, and that from this starting point the plague has since been disseminated throughout the central part of the state.

This plague has been eradicated from all the counties of the state except Alameda, Contra Costa and San Benito and there is every reason to believe that it will ultimately be eradicated altogether.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT THE TUESDAY AFTERNOON CLUB

youngsters, Margaret Lou Ledbetter and Floyd Kenney.

Impersonations of Scrooge were well done by George Meldo Harrison, Jr., in Scrooge as a child, an apprentice, Kenneth Cousins; as a young man, Gerald Toll; a corpse by Franklin Bates, and his former chum "Dick", played by Livingstone Thom; his nephew "Fred," Gerald Toll; niece, by marriage, Mildred McKee; Scrooge's little sister "Fan," Billy Harrison; a former sweetheart, Edith Kirbenstein; his rival, John T. Jenkins, and the rival's daughter by Bernice Kirbenstein. Katherine Hendricks as Mr. Topper, a lover, was good. Fred's sister-in-law portrayed by Hazel Walters. Dorothy Shaw was the guest who sings and her sweet voice was creditably shown in her selection of "Angels Ever Bright and Fair."

Wee Rhodora McKee made a charmingly pretty baby who caused much excitement at the Christmas party and her excited sister played by Virginia Thom, provoked hearty laughter. Mildred McKee made an attractive nurse and constance Domsler was a pleasing housemaid, and her cousin, the Baker, was well carried off by Gerald Toll. The Cook and Milkman proved to be Hazel Walters and Jack Jenkins. Special guests of wealth attending the Christmas ball given by Old Fezziwig and Mrs. Fezziwig were well portrayed by Dorothy Potter, Marian Grey, Betty Heustis and Marjorie Yarick while John Richardson and Maynard Toll made two excellent "Portly Gentlemen."

Shirley Chase was sweet and dainty in her portrayal "Spirit of Christmas Past" and her lines with Scrooge afforded good opportunities for these young performers to display voice and ability.

In fairy-like attire of misty blue and scattering cheer from her golden horn of plenty, Dorothy Bonnell made a delightful and graceful Spirit of Christmas Past.

"The Dark Phantom of the Future" by Willard Hewes cast the shade of gloom intended and he made much out of his silent role. "The Spirit of New Resolutions" was appropriately given by Virginia Thom.

Special mention is due the youngsters, members of Miss Dale's music class and trained by herself, which formed the vested choir singing a sweetly pretty carol at the opening of the performance. The young voices burst into song at the front of the theater, passing down one aisle, across the front, back up the other aisle to the entrance, chanting the carol, and it was most impressive.

Master Forrest Jordan with his violin was exceptionally good as the "fiddler," playing the dance music in the Christmas ball scene.

In dramatizing and producing Dickens' Christmas Carol, Mrs Sloan presented a beautiful object lesson not alone for the little children, but each one of us. She brought out most wonderfully the idea of "More blessed to give than to receive," and undoubtedly her wish expressed, will be carried out, for few children left the theater after yesterday's performance in whose memory will not live the selfishness of old Scrooge and the happy change brought about later in his life after the fairy's object lessons.

Upon leaving, each guest present was given a rosy red apple by members of the hospitality committee.

If some men are skeptical others place an implicit faith in the doctor's prescriptions; and of these was a man in Limerick who went to the undertaker to order a coffin for Pat Connell.

"Dear me," said the undertaker, "is poor Pat dead?"

"No, he's not dead yet," answered the other, "but he'll die tonight, for the doctor says he can't live till morning, and he knows what he gave him."—Medical Pickwick.

VALLEY VIEW

H. J. Blanchard will move this week from 1551 Hawthorne to 1610 Vine street.

Sea gulls make daily visits to this locality and seem quite at home on the streets.

J. B. Work arrived a few days ago from Savannah, Ga., to join his wife, who has been staying the past year with her mother, Mrs. Sarah Ward, 1438 Hawthorne. Mr. Work says that prosperity struck the Southland and the Eastern part of the country about two months ago and that every man who wants work can get it. Even then there is great demand for skilled laborers.

WHY "RIGHT OR WRONG?"

Some honest persons doubt the wisdom of being for our country, right or wrong. The doctrine, however, is certainly sound, regardless of what of evil it may suggest.

It is sound because it precludes the possibility of individuals conscientiously deserting their country's cause on the fool notion that the cause might be wrong.

If the individual is left free to judge in every great crisis whether the country is right or wrong, the excuse to be a coward would be too great to resist. The country would always be adjudged wrong.

We are for our country, right or wrong, on the strong hope and probability that it aways will be right and that the judgment of the individual may sometimes be wrong.

"What is that letter?" asked the busy merchant.

"Answer to your letter to a young lady proposing matrimony. Replying to your esteemed favor, the young lady declines."

"Hum! Send her our follow-up form No. 17."—Puck.

CARNATIONS FOR NEW MEMBERS

Anyone joining the Glendale Garden society before January 6 will be presented with half a dozen slips of fine carnations. These alone are worth more than the annual membership fee which is only 25c. The Garden society now numbers over 75 members. In addition, there are at least fifty people who have expressed a desire to join, but who have not yet signed their names or paid their dues.

This society makes no personal appeals for members. Every one of the 75 members have come of their own initiative and signified their willingness to join. That is why the society has already proved so successful, why it has already begun to be an influence for good in the city of Glendale. Every member is a live wire. There is no dead wood amongst them. There are no join-because-I-had-to members. We are all up and doing, every individual on the alert to do whatever lies in his or her power.

The offer of carnation slips is made for two reasons: First, that people may understand that the Garden society stands for mutual helpfulness; it exists in order that the members may get something out of it, and feeling that they have been personally benefited, those persons in turn will seek to benefit others, and to put into the society their loyal, active service.

Second, the president, Mrs. Nanno Woods, if she does not give away the slips will be obliged to throw them out. She preaches the doctrine of mutual helpfulness, and endeavors to practice what she preaches. So long as her carnation slips hold out, just so long will she gladly and cheerfully give them away in this manner. Perhaps other people who have far finer gardens than Mrs. Woods will be encouraged to do likewise. Call at headquarters, 1111 West Broadway to join the society or to make any further enquiries.

TROPICO

A large Christmas tree laden with numerous gifts was one of the pleasant features of the pretty Christmas party with which Mr. and Mrs. Joseph V. Griffin entertained at their home on West Acacia street. Graceful pepper boughs, holly and mistleto were used in the pretty decorations, which converted the rooms into a veritable bower, where music, merriment and Christmas cheer predominated. Another delightful feature of the glad day was the dinner at which Mrs. Griffin presided in her usual charming manner. Covers were laid for ten, which included Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Weiler, Major J. J. Weiler, Robert N. Taylor, Misses Emma Lee, Melba and Lena Weiler, Joseph V. Griffin and James Griffin.

One of the happiest of the many Christmas dinner parties was the family dinner given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hobbs on North Central avenue. Eastern holly and California poinsettias adorned the table at which gracious hospitality was dispensed by Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs when those seated with the host and hostess included Mrs. May West, mother of Mrs. Hobbs; Mr. and Mrs. Andy Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Logan, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Mabry, C. C. West; Misses Katherine and Dorothy Hobbs, Mary Logan and Janette Mabry, C. C. West and Dwight Stephenson.

Mr. and Mrs. Norton Marshall, with their niece, Miss Martha La Fontaine, who were the Christmas guests of Mrs. Marshall's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William La Fontaine of West Acacia street, have returned to their home in Santa Barbara.

Mrs. Joseph V. Griffin of West Acacia street, with her sister, Mrs. M. H. Weiler, as her guest, enjoyed "The Bird of Paradise" matinee this afternoon in Los Angeles.

W. B. Hudson of Los Angeles was the dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs Jos. V. Griffin, Sunday.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON CLUB MEETS

Tuesday, December 28, was Children's Day at the Tuesday Afternoon club. The program had been arranged to take place in the Palace Grand theater, at which place the meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. H. E. Bartlett, at 2 o'clock, in place of the regular hour, 2:30. Mrs. Bartlett made a few remarks to club members, a short business meeting following and minutes of the last meeting read by Mrs. Lawrence Ellis, the new secretary installed by the board to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of the former officer, Mrs. O. W. Tarr.

Mrs. Bartlett then introduced the hostess manager for the afternoon, Mrs. Charles H. Toll, who made a short address of welcome to the club's little guests and the ladies, not forgetting to mention the untiring and effective work of Mrs. Coral Harrison Sloan, who dramatized and produced the playlet, and in her delightful and capable manner read the line of the story presented by some fifty children, which was Dickens' Christmas Carol. Mrs. Toll also thanked Mr. Jensen, manager of the theater for his kindness in giving the use of his beautiful theater and a vote of thanks was extended Mr. Lee, who was so liberally kind in assisting with stage lightings, etc. Then the entertainer for the afternoon, Mrs. Sloan, was introduced by Mrs. Toll. After a greeting to the children Mrs. Sloan introduced her very young but capable and entertaining assistants, who in turn gave us the story of "Scrooge."

FORTY-EIGHTH STATE FRUIT GROWERS' CONVENTION

This convention, which will be held in San Bernardino February 18 and 19, 1916, gives rich promise. The orange discussion will be led by C. C. Chapman, who will speak especially of the possible value of a "brand." The discussion of the lemon will be in charge of C. C. Teague. A. D. Shamel has kindly consented to speak of the pomelo. Important new facts will be presented. Marketing will be discussed by our new commissioner of marketing, Colonel Harris Weinstock. Doctor G. Harold Powell will speak on the problems of the citrus industry. The citrus outlook of the north Butte, Sacramento and Tulare counties, will be presented by Fred Mason, W. W. Hinsey and H. Webster, respectively. Soils and soil fertility will be discussed by the Messrs. H. J. Webber, I. G. McBeth and W. P. Kelley, three very able soil experts. The 8 to 1 orange test will be explained. Professor H. J. Quayle will give the latest on fighting scale insects. E. O. Essig and H. C. Bryant will give lantern talks on insects and birds, respectively. Colonel Weinstock will repeat the address which he gave at Visalia, which elicited great praise.

This convention will be held at the time of the Nationa' Orange show. Two such exceptional attractions must draw a host of citrus growers to these meetings.

A one-day apple meeting will be conducted by Chief Deputy Commissioner G. P. Weldon on Saturday, February 19th.

HAD THINGS HANDY LIKE

An old lady with a peaked black bonnet got aboard a Burlington train. She turned to a boy, and pointing to the brake cord, asked: "What's that?"

"That's the bell cord; it rings into the dining-car."

The old woman hooked the end of her parasol over the cord and gave it a vigorous jerk. Instantly the brakes were set and the train came to a stop.

The conductor rushed in and yelled:

"Who pulled that cord?"

"Well, what do you want"? shouted the conductor.

"A cup of coffee and a ham sandwich."

A NICKEL GONE WRONG

A new settlement worker was going the rounds of her district one bright spring morning. In a crowded tenement five or six little children gazed inquiringly at her as she entered.

"Well, well, children," she said, "I never saw so many soiled faces in my life. Why don't you use some soap and water?"

"We're waitin' for de angel, mum," answered little Tommie Tuff.

"What angel?" asked the young woman

"Why, de lady dat comes frue here last week an' gived one of de kids a nickel to wash his face."

PRUNING ORANGE TREES

There is nothing in connection with the growing and care of an orange grove of more importance than proper pruning. In writing on this subject, J. S. Soule, a practical pruner, says in the Covina Argus:

"The object of pruning a fruit tree is to put it in proper form and healthy condition, for the purpose of securing a better quality and more profitable crop of fruit. To accomplish this, there must be kept up a good supply of healthy fruit wood. The maximum productive powers of a tree cannot possibly be secured by neglecting this very vital part of fruit growing.

"Of all the fruit trees, the orange seems to be able to stand the most neglect during the first few years and still produce abundantly; but all this is to the detriment of the tree in after years, which many owners of orange orchards are beginning to discover to their sorrow.

"The orange tree has a habit of sending up a growth of rank shoots. These are commonly, and very appropriately called "suckers," for the reason that if permitted to grow they will absorb and rob the lower and surrounding branches of the life-giving elements that belong to them, and the inevitable result will be a dense, shady upper portion of the tree, shutting out necessary sunlight from the interior. Then follows decay and death of all or much of the inside branches. To still further aggravate this condition, each annual growth, with its weight of fruit, bears heavily down upon and covers up that of the year before. Thus generation after generation, the outside branches overlap the dead and the dying. While feeding the roots, by water and proper fertilization, is absolutely necessary, it also adds to this condition, proving conclusively that under an intensive system of cultivation and feeding, something else is necessary—and that is proper pruning. It is also a fact that if the cold steel of the intelligent pruner is not applied, the tree continues to grow from bad to worse and sooner or later the terminal branches begin to show signs of weakness by their motley, heterogenous, and small yellowish leaves. Neglect of cultivation and feeding will increase this deterioration; but no amount of intensified cultivation and feeding will ever bring back to life the dead and dying.

"After a few years of 'nature pruning,' the exterior of the tree becomes more open, letting in the life-giving sunlight. Then follows a growth of fruit wood on the trunk and along the larger limbs. While nature is thus asserting herself, by her only method of pruning, she becomes especially busy in the top of the tree. And just here it may be well to call attention to the error that many, who have not given the subject sufficient study, fall into and claim that nature's methods cannot be improved upon. To all such I will say that this is all very true with the tree in the forest of its nativity, but it is well understood that in this day and age all commercial fruits are grown under artificial and stimulated conditions, and that a warfare is continually going on between the two. As the artificial produces the largest yield and greatly improved quality of fruits, it is necessary for man to be constantly diligent and always 'on guard.'"—Pacific Fruit World.

FUMIGATION TABLES

Waste and inefficiency in fumigating fruit trees are going to be lessened by a new publication of the University of California.

What doses to use in fumigating fruit trees is set forth in a bulletin entitled, "New Dosage Tables," by C. W. Woodworth, professor of entomology in the University of California.

The tables commonly in use heretofore are now shown to be grossly inaccurate. Trees higher or lower than the ordinary orchard tree have been getting much weaker doses in fumigation than they ought to have had. The new tables help the fruitgrower to set the matter right.

That the most important improvement needed in fumigation practice is the general adoption of correct allowance for tent leakage is declared by Professor Woodworth. These tables help to solve that difficulty.

The tables in use in the past were practicaly sound for medium conditions, but with orchards where trees are either unusually large or unusually small, the new tables will help toward a great increase in efficiency and economy in fumigating.

WHAT BECAME OF LITTLE MARY

Little Mary started to school, slate and pencil in hand.

By and by she stopped the use of the slate, and a tablet was substituted. She also dropped the "r" from her name and spelled it "May."

High-school days increased her knowledge and also her name. It appeared "Mayme."

College days were crowded full and the little notes reached home signed "Mae."

College days have passed and gone and in a home of her own they call her just "Ma."

TIME TO PRUNE

On this subject the University of Florida experiment station offers the following suggestions:

Dead wood, diseased wood and dropped fruit are the sources of infection for many of the worst fungus diseases. The removal of these from the grove is the best measure of prevention for many diseases, and in stem end rot and withertip it is a necessary measure. The best time to prune is during the dormant season, in December and January. The next best time is in the summer, after the first flush of growth has thoroughly hardened, in June and July.

Growers are cautioned that pruning for withertip when soft wood is present is apt to result in injury rather than benefit. Remove as many dead twigs and branches as possible. Prune back into the live, healthy wood. Make smooth cuts at the base of a branch, so that no projecting stubs will be left. They are very susceptible to withertip infection, and such stubs will die and neutralize the effect of taking out the dead wood. The larger cut surfaces should be slowly available and of little value for immediate use.

BIG TREES

People generally associate ideas of the California big trees with the Mariposa grove, near the Yosemite, and yet it appears that there are in the Sequoia national park 1,166,000 trees, 12,000 of which exceed ten feet in diameter. Some idea of the immensity of one of these big trees can be gathered from the statement that "three thousand fenceposts sufficient to support a wire fence around 8,000 or 9,000 acres, have been made from one of these giants, and that was only the first step toward using its huge carcass. Six hundred and fifty thousand shingles, enough to cover the roofs of seventy or eighty houses, formed the second item of its product. Finally, there still remained hundreds of cords of firewood which no one could use because of the prohibitive expense of hauling the wood out of the mountains."—Manufacturers' Record.

A FABLE

The Lion was telling the Leopard why he roared in the jungle when going about hunting. "Doing business openly and with plenty of advertising," the Lion said, "is what has made my reputation. I got my characterization as King of the Beasts by blowing my horn. Always let the other fellows know you are around and they will respect you and fear you."

A Rabbit, hiding and shivering in a clump of pampas grass, overheard this conversation and all the next day he pondered upon it. He decided it was better to have the other animals fear him than to live himself in constant terror. So the Rabbit filled his lungs with a great breath and tried to roar like a Lion.

A Coyote, learning of the Rabbit's whereabouts by his roar, hopped onto him and ate him up.

MORAL—If you haven't got the goods, there is no use to advertise.—Judge.

"Well, sir, I was going to say, it's this way. I don't want to do the gentleman in question any injustice, and I won't go so far as to say, sir, that he's lazy, exactly; but if it required any voluntary work on his part to digest his food—why, he'd die from lack of nourishment, sir."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

It is not doing the thing we like to do, but liking the thing we have to do, that makes life blessed.—Goethe.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CAR

The motor seems like a thing of life, abounding in vitality—trigger swift in the gliding get-away, and splendidly free from the slightest jerk, or jump, or jolt

A reflection of this is the steadiness of the car—that freedom from trembling and vibration in the tonneau which means so much in ease and comfort

The motor is 30-35 horsepower
